4 Tips to Create a Quiet Space

Providing a quiet space is a no-cost or low-cost way to support children and adults who may need a sensory break from a gathering, group activity, or a more formal synagogue experience. You don't need a permanent room to provide a quiet space. Keep everything you'll need in a box so it's portable.

1. Let people know that you offer a quiet space. Post a sign, include a statement on all handouts, flyers, and on your website. "Chabad is committed to including all people. A quiet space is provided for anyone who would like to use it."
2. Use lamps and low lighting instead of fluorescent lighting.
3. When considering sensory-friendly items, be mindful of choking hazards or soft items that might encourage mouthing. Make sure all items can be sanitized/wiped down after use. Also consider if you will be using this on shabbos or at events - or both.
 - Sensory-friendly items - Ideas:
 - Bean bag chairs
 - Fidget toys--spinners, small squishy balls, manipulatives
 - Legos and Duplos
 - Playdoh
 - Crayons and coloring books
 - Snacks--crunchy bars and chips, gummies, apples, bananas. Offer gluten-free alternatives and avoid tree nuts.
 - Headphones
 - Small weighted blanket
 - Figurines for imaginative, independent play
4. Use ShabbaTTogether as an opportunity for your community members to take ownership of this project in your synagogue/community. CLICK HERE to download and print a "How-to Guide" on creating a sensory bin and ask if anyone would like to take it on.
